

Social Studies Distance Learning

Week #3

Welcome Friends! It doesn't seem possible that we are into the third week of distance learning for Social Studies. I miss all of you so much and just wish that we could be back together in school, my happy place. I'm hoping you will find this week's activities fun and a good refresher. We are moving into our Native Americans Unit.

This very short video will help you remember where in Virginia the Tribes were and what their languages were. By the way, there will be no test on Tuesday.

The following video will last about 25 minutes. Have a piece of paper handy while watching and answer these questions (it may be helpful to have the closed captioning on so you can read along).

1. What is a dugout?
2. What are some of the artifacts that the archeologists have found?
3. What were the roles of women that they discussed?
4. If you read Stone Fox, you'll remember the reason Stone Fox wanted to win the race was to win money to buy back land for his people. Did you notice that some of the Virginia Natives are continuing to do the same?
5. What is a powwow?
6. Is a powwow a form of entertainment or a spiritual ceremony?
7. During a powwow, why do they dance in a circle?

8. What symbols are represented by the drums?
9. What is regalia?
10. What is regalia primarily made of?
11. What are their food sources for each season (you may need to pause the video)?
12. What is a longhouse?

Go to your Benchmark page and look for your assignment for the book, Pocahontas and Squanto. Read about what a biography is and then read just the section on Pocahontas and fill in the chart below using homophones found in the story (you may use vocab.com):

Page	Word	Sentence used in text	Meaning #1 of how it is used in text	Meaning #2 from a dictionary
6	meal
7	sound
9	ransom
11	trip

If you have access to paper and/or crayons, you can print the patterns below to make a headdress. If you can't copy the pattern, do your best to draw out the feathers and the band. Have fun with it! Have your family take part. Who will be the chief? Should the chief have more feathers? If you do the activity, please take a picture and text it to me at 703-967-7040.
